Skill

National Bureau
for Students with Disabilities

Why become a Skill member?

Join a national network of people interested in issues affecting disabled students, trainees and jobseekers.

As a member you will become a partner in our work to support and empower disabled people.

Add your voice to Skill's efforts to influence national policy and practice.

'I can't pretend to be an expert on all issues affecting my work with disabled people, so I rely on Skill membership to keep informed. Through Skill's conferences and membership publications I connect with many other people who have important ideas and information to share. I would be cut-off without membership to Skill.'

Skill relies on its members, many of whom are disabled, for guidance, advice and governance.

What are the benefits?

What people say about Skill

‘Skill is the first resource I go to, and I recommend it to colleagues and students.’

‘Skill helped me find out what support I would be entitled to. Before I started my course they sent me information about access to funding in Braille so I could read it myself. What’s great about Skill is that they are there for you all the time—information and advice are just on the other end of the phone.’
